

Craig Magnussen

Craig is a management and environmental professional with over 25 years of experience in the public sector. He is passionate about sustainable natural resource management and delivering effective, outcomes-focused organisational leadership.

In addition to tertiary qualifications in applied science and business, Craig also has a broad range of management expertise, spanning fields such as: compliance to environmental sustainability, planning and development assessment, contaminated land management to environmental health, invasive pest management, waste management, and public art.

He has held technical, managerial, and executive roles in Queensland State and local government and is currently the Chief Executive Officer of the Darling Downs-Moreton Rabbit Board, based in Warwick in south-east Queensland. Craig is a Director and Deputy Chair of Queensland Water and Land Carers, Queensland's peak body for NRM volunteers.

Craig lives on a small farm with his young family near Stanthorpe, and is an active member of the Granite Belt community.
